

Birthing the Day 6 Galactic Energies

As we entered Day 6 of the Galactic Underworld of new beginnings (November 2008), we left behind a destructive shadow government and multiple systems that were detrimental to the planet. They polluted our land and its streams and rivers, they polluted our bodies, and they polluted the consciousness of the masses who were left with anger, hate, and frustration. They also left many people in the dark, struggling to get on their feet or dying in the streets. Last, they left people bankrupt and hopeless.

These experiences are dismal for many and they are continuing to play out in our material reality. The material reality is the 3-D reality where we know ourselves through the physical, emotional, and mental awareness that we experience in real-time. However, there is also a spiritual dimension that most are not in tuned with and that is the dimension where Day 6 of the Galactic Underworld is birthing, where the old is being replaced by the new.

Because there's a lag in the time that light waves hit the Earth, the impact of galactic center light energy is not immediately experienced in real-time. To us, the cumulative light waves in the galactic center are currently one dot at the end of the galactic tunnel. Major galactic events ripple through time and space all the time, but we do not experience the direct result of the cosmic events when they occur due to time and space lag. Right now, we are sharing in the rebirth of our galaxy, though we are currently experiencing, in real-time, the death throes of our current planetary reality. The galactic light waves are rippling toward Earth but the final impact and corresponding effect of the waves will take time before they envelop the entire planet.

These waves are making their way through the galaxy to our planet and into our DNA where we will become our future selves to ultimately realize, formulate, and implement a new vision. But the impact of the waves is currently only realized in the spiritual plane: the impact has yet to hit us real-time where we can see or experience the results on the material plane. The good news, however, is that the seeds are being planted. As such, we will eventually realize, in real-time, a burgeoning new reality with the potential to provide new systems.

This galactic event is no different than other major events that occurred throughout the planet's history. Changes in the cosmos continually caused many planets to die, change, and rebirth, while any corresponding civilizations rose and fell with the planet. In Earth's past, planetary changes created new continents, new trade routes, and brought in better systems of technology, government, religion and economics. They also coincided with great social and cultural upheaval. Because these cosmic events changed the face of the planet, they forced people to learn new methods to survive and flourish. Sometimes people were successful and other times they weren't and didn't survive.

This time, however, as the light energies of the galactic center move toward us, we are confronting challenges that will force us to be quite visionary, step out of our comfort zones and take a great leap. All of our governmental, economic, and cultural systems are being forced to change in the present reality. They are dying quickly at the moment so that the seeds of realization, which are currently being sowed, will grow without resistance. We are all being forced to realize unique solutions for our future. So this is the year to plant the seeds of change and feed these visions.

Like it or not, we are going to experience great change and new beginnings. All civilizations are preparing to herald a prophesied new age. As the Mayan calendars converge at an “end point” it is believed in many indigenous cultures that we will experience a change in time and space as never known before. Thus, our personal harvests will depend on where each of us is in our galactic evolution. If we can detect the galactic light waves and see the light at the end of the galactic tunnel, then we can start realizing our dreams and the new vision for our future.

By the time 2012 arrives, some of us will be walking through the door to the other side and will experience the galactic rebirth in real-time. At that time, our bodies will be flooded with light waves and we will not only realize our dreams but will also start to experience the physical and materials changes birthed by the Day 6 energies. These energies are the light that will continue to feed the new systems that are replacing the old, just as the light that feeds Mother Earth during her cycles allows her to rebirth in the spring. Enjoy the transition if you can and stay focused. Be aware that this is the prophesied time that we have all been expecting during our lifetime.
