

The Continuing Saga of the Black Hole Events – Pt. 2 : Nuclear Holocaust

In light of recent nuclear events and the insanity of those governments, including the US, which are insisting that nuclear power is still safe and are moving forward with nuclear facilities, the evidence is in. We are on the verge of a nuclear holocaust. My dreams of a black hole imploding in a bright red bang, a wormhole shutting down, planetary debris flying through space, and hoards of ships moving through galactic space, may imply that we're at the end. It could well mean that humans, in their infinite stupidity and evil, may finally do the unspeakable; destroy not only planet Earth but our entire solar system and possibly even our galaxy.

To reiterate, here are the events as I saw them. In one of the first dreams, I was moving away from a black hole in the galactic center.

As I looked back at the hole, there was a fiery red color on that side of the galaxy from which I had emerged. As I looked harder, it appeared that the red was shifting shades from oranges to red and to black. On the outer rim of the black hole, on the side that I was currently watching from, there appeared to be a white circle surrounding the rim. When I looked harder, it was a Phoenix with its wings in a circular formation surrounding the hole, as it closed and sealed entry through and exit from the other side.

In a follow-up dream, I saw what looked like flattened dirigibles coming out of the hole en masse, almost like a fleet of ships or planes that might emerge from the event horizon, readying for an air attack or an air rescue. I did not witness any action other than the emergence of the ships and their movement down the galactic road through our galaxy. But my impression was that they were coming into our solar system for some purpose.

Then I had another dream: there were dense meteors also emerging from near the mouth of the serpent and they were moving quickly and bombarding everything in their path. I did not see where they or the ships were heading; I only saw them coming from near the hole and moving toward me.

Could this signal a cosmic explosion that ripples through the galaxy and space? It's hard to believe that this may be the scenario that's unfolding in my dreams but hardly surprising, given the greed and evil that have spread through the political, military-industrial, and religious circles on the planet. It was only a matter of time before it all finally came to a head and now we have pretty much reached the end of the road with no detour in sight.

The fact that I am seeing these events may largely be due to the timing of the nuclear disaster in Japan, which occurred when the lunar North Node was on the Galactic Center. My sun sign is combust the Galactic Center, and I have been having these dreams since my birthday in December, 2010, when the sun was combust the Galactic Center and the lunar north node was approaching the Galactic Center. So I may have been privy to these events before they occurred.

There is little I can add now in exasperation; I and others have been saying what there is to say about impending disasters for years, but to no avail. The events and insanity make me wonder if the privatization of space and the military, as well as recent space ventures and talk of inhabiting Mars, may be what those in power have in mind once they destroy Planet Earth or even before they do.

Maybe they intend to continue to deplete this planet's resources, and move their base of operations to Mars, keeping humans on the planet to slave in the mines. It has happened once before (refer to Zecharia Sitchin's Earth Chronicles).

The evil of those in power cannot be whitewashed; these are people who have no moral conscience or ethics; their only concerns are wealth and power. It boggles the mind to think that after every war and technological disaster--whether it is mining, oil spills, nuclear disasters, or ground fracturing (fracking) for natural gas, with its resultant quakes and water pollution--the criminal industrialists and their cronies continue to pat each other on the back and ignore the human and environmental damage that they inflict on the planet. They call it collateral damage; the rest of us call it crimes against humanity.

The United States is literally falling apart at the seams and yet not one penny is going to help the infrastructure and the citizens of the country who are paying the price for these disasters that were inflicted at their expense. The moral turpitude of those in power is akin to the lowest element of thuggery and debauchery.

Some years ago I had yet another dream that I was walking with an associate in a vast wasteland of what had been a US city, looking for survivors among the dead, while spaceships were beaming up the last of sea creatures that had survived the toxic, dying oceans and dwindling clean sources of water. There was a war in the skies as I moved from ruin to ruin, trying to find drinkable water and those who might have survived so that we could round them up for rescue.

This might otherwise be a scenario straight out of a science fiction novel, but it is far from fiction at this point; it is fact. Yet right-wing denialists get paid big bucks to promote bad science while those with plausible warnings are left ridiculed and unheeded. It doesn't take rocket science to witness what is happening to the planet now due to human meddling and inept planning; we have only to watch as Japan tries to clean up its nuclear mess while the radiation spreads around the globe.

Sensitive people are becoming ill right now. I've been running a fever with headaches on and off for the last two weeks. No cold or flu, just toxicity in my body for no "apparent" reason. But the powers-that-be would have us believe that low-level doses of radiation will not harm us. Maybe it won't over the short-term, outside of an initial physical discomfort, but as we watch plant and animal species mutate, we can expect that we will be next if we survive at all, as we struggle to ward off the toxic dumps to our systems.

Our economic and political institutions have become more concerned with computer viruses that attack their personal possessions and paperless money, than with man-made viruses that attack the bodily functions and nervous systems of the masses. They spend more money making sure that their precious wealth is guaranteed than the lives of people who, to them, are just expendable commodities to be trashed or buried once their health and value as labor are depleted. This is the sign of depraved human souls that have been unable or unwilling to tap into the connectedness of all living beings, which will ultimately destroy everyone, including the depraved, no matter how much wealth they have accumulated.

If my dreams tell me anything, it's that we are definitely in the end times, and everything is playing out as I've seen it played out in my dreams. The only thing left is the great implosion and the mass entrance and exit of spaceships with what's left of sacred life on this planet. Certainly our world leaders don't see the value of sustaining the sacred with their wars and greed; if we're lucky, those from other galaxies do and will help us to resettle elsewhere.

Do not listen to the media for direction; pay attention to your higher self if you wish to survive and help others make it through this crisis. You will not get the help of world governments; they are all hell bent on taking their last stand, and they will bring each other down as they fall, without any regard for the common folks. This includes the United States of America, with all of its lies about democracy and human rights. The only human rights that the USA is concerned about are those of the wealthy and their corporate interests.

While once the land of the free and home of the brave, the USA has become the land of deceit and corporate depravity. Those that brought these disasters upon us will eventually fall just like everyone else. But they will not have the help of those that survive when their time comes. Their corpses will be left to rot in their own cesspool of radioactive and toxic debris. We are definitely witnessing the end times.
