

Birthing the Indigo Crystalis

The indigo blue crystalis is birthing its way into our consciousness and taking us with it down the rainbow-blue path of light. For me, the birthing process started about two months ago when I began to see indigo-blue crystals gleaming into my third eye of higher consciousness. They were the most incredible crystal visions I've ever seen. They were bursting with wonderful blue colors and vibrant blue energies. These visions have continued to today, manifesting through my third-eye. As such, I have changed the colors in my one meditation room and now I get visions in various blue shades, always opening doors to a clear deep crystal light whose depth I cannot penetrate but which is now supra-penetrating my higher consciousness.

The consciousness that is emerging from my particular crystalis engages the cherub/butterfly/faery/dragon-fly archetypes. As I close my eyes, I find myself bursting another blue crystal vision with clarity and detail, down to the elemental level. These archetypes and their elementals are expanding my capacity to rise and fly beyond my limitations. My latest visions have birthed a new expressive freedom as I transcend the challenges posed by encroaching hurtles, and push my limits to their fullest so that I can become limitless. These air elements are also transporting and "fusing" energy from their light source to my consciousness, expanding it so that I may capture this new level of awareness.

The indigo light is guiding my soul through the dark crystalis as the encroaching solar flare approaches, connecting my higher consciousness to the other side, guiding me to my highest vision. How this plays out for me ultimately is yet to be defined, however, my consciousness is now being redirected, reinvented, resurrected, redefined and repurposed as the light penetrates my being and connects my soul beyond the solar fire through a fusion of light waves.

The crystals in my visions start with crystal points that burst into butterflies, fairies, dragonflies, and cherubs of light, expanding under a bright and vivid blue Star of David. It appears to be the awakening of a multi-linear consciousness that allows me to see beyond the mundane aspects of the physical and material world, to navigate my life based on a broader spectrum of awareness and vibrational opportunities. The vibration is the deep royal sapphire of India to the indigo blue tanzanite of Tanzania.

In its crystalline butterfly form, this deep indigo light represents the void between the living body and soul when the soul seeks deliverance and a return to all that is. The crystal butterfly/cherub takes us through the rebirthing process by expediting the rebirth experience, which can be defined by fairy/dragonfly elegance or unbridled madness, depending on our state of mind and soul. The indigo blue crystalis can birth beauty out of darkness as it emerges through the solar flame. Those souls with a higher purpose can reconnect with the collective consciousness but with a multi-linear conscious awareness. Those that can't do not move forward. But those who do can gain access to a vibration that connects multi-linear mindsets, making it easier to create new paradigms for co-existence. The vibration provides a cosmic perspective on the influence that one consciousness can have on another and the implications of that active cosmic consciousness while vibrating at a higher level.

This indigo light, birthing from a crystal point into a human-like crystalis, is a metaphor for all of our lives as we transition from death to life and move through the tunnel of karmic self-evaluation. There is no clear method to describe this birth as it is both painful and joyous, depending on our ability to successfully integrate what is around us, and our ability to reintegrate into new avenues of creative thought that repurpose our connectivity to the cosmic wheel of life. The blue ray of interconnection is forcing us to become connected human beings in more than the physical and material, and the pain is synonymous with the learning experience. The ray is forcing us to infuse ourselves with the light and expose ourselves, at all levels, for good or for bad. The fusing element is conjoining our multi-linear mindset, cementing those with similar mindsets into the center of one wheel of a new evolving consciousness.

The new vibrational indigo light is splitting each crystal into a ray of indigo blues, infusing our minds with multifaceted faces, reflections, thoughts, and knowledge. These are exploding into crystal blue creations and into different layers of consciousness like bursts of light that ignite spokes on a wheel. The blue-ray energy transmissions are changing us at the cellular level so that we can mature into our new selves. It is stimulating us at the cellular level and is lighting up our DNA so that it can create a bridge and reconnect to the subtleties of cosmic awareness. These lights are naturally occurring crystalline energies forming a new natural cellular grid away from the artificial cellular grid of crystals. This grid provides a unique opportunity to tap into a purpose-driven stream of consciousness and communicate through like-mindedness through purposeful evaluation. These are the natural cosmic cellular connections that are birthed through natural crystal with the guidance of the light spectrum, which are the polar opposite of those mental connections that run off artificially charged cellular, or wireless, energy sources. That energy is directed by often chaotic and noisy signals rather than the natural energy of rebirthing a consciousness on an emerging vibrational level.

The indigo blue ray is the highest human karmic light ray: the “learning” and “lesson” ray where we must self-evaluate for our rebirth. This is the key lesson of the indigo-blue light; to evaluate oneself truthfully, as a philosopher or psychologist might evaluate motives and drivers in a patient. The indigo blue light is providing us all with the opportunity to evaluate our highest goals, identify our limitations, and then exceed our self-imposed limitations to meet our goals. There are currently indigo blue energy rays everywhere that are bombarding us with splendid opportunities for self-awareness and evaluation, group and cosmic participation, completion of spiritual lessons, and/or achieving a rebirth. These opportunities and how they ultimately affect you will depend on your own self-awareness and highest desires.

The indigo blue ray is the energy for healing our frayed souls and for rebirthing. It is encroaching on us as we emerge from the crystalis, and the result is that people, institutions, and systems awakening for the first time to an awareness that will have an impact on how we heal ourselves from our past errors, communicate our highest desires, and connect on a soul level to fulfill them.